

Native American Student Leadership Conference

Theme: Aim High

Hosted by Salt Lake Community College

Wednesday, September 26, 2018 from 8:00am – 2:00pm

Keynote Speaker: Sahar Khadjenoury

Sahar Khadjenoury produced her first Public Service Announcement to address environmental dangers of improper natural resource extraction on her Reservation on the Northern Navajo Nation.

After she obtained her Film degree, she started working immediately as Associate Producer for clients such as Adobe and Microsoft. She also took that time to establish herself with a Public Relations Firm. She made her move back to Southern California to work for First Nations Experience TV for two years and that given her the opportunity to reach more of her Native American community and to continue her work as a producer and to serve as the Liaison between the many worlds that are comprised of Tribal Governments, FNX TV, the parent station KVCR, the community of both Native and non-Natives, PBS, and educational entities.

Sahar Khadjenoury is a member of the Native American Journalist Association (NAJA), Honor Society, and the American Indian Science and Engineering Society (AISES).

Students will have the opportunity to learn about careers in:

- Communications
- Media
- Broadcasting

From experts in these fields.

Students will also get the chance to learn about education and funding opportunities that are available for these and other fields.
